BAD FOR RABBITS.

Dr. Holtzendorff of Mishawaka, With Plymouth Hunters, Slays Twenty-
Seven In One Day.

This is the open season for hunting rabbits, especially if a man keeps on his own land. It so happened that Dr. Henry Holtzendorff, of Mishawaka does not own a farm, but he wanted to hunt rabbits. He therefore came to Plymouth Sunday evening, and interested Lott Loney in the subject of hunting. The result was that Lott got a hunting outfit in some way, and as they wished to hunt on some one's ground they got William Ormond in on the deal, as he has a farm west of town. All was going well, and the party only lacked transportation to the happy hunting grounds to begin the slaughter. Walter Thayer was appealed to, and with his automobile joined the gang, and soon they were started for the land where the bunnies roam. They spent the day in the pursuit of the nimble little fellows, and by night had bagged twenty-seven. It is reported that Dr. Holtzendorff got his full share of the game, and was as pleased as a school boy with his first pair of red-top boots. Returning to Plymouth after a fine day of sport, the happy doctor stayed over night with the family of John Loney, and in the morning left for Mishawaka with all the rabbits he wished to carry as proof of his prowess and skill as a shooter. We are pleased to learn that Dr. Holtzendorff is doing well in his profession and wish him unbounded success. He is a son of Dr. A. C. Holtzendorff of north Michigan street, and an old Plymouth boy.

We Keep Faith with Our Customers

We have rather peculiar ideas about running a retail store. We believe that the merchant who looks out for his customers' interests will never have to worry about his own interests. Business success, like happiness, comes to the average man INDIRECTLY. The fellow who goes about seeking happiness is the most unfortunate individual imaginable; the man who does his duty from day to day and tries to make others content finds true happiness. And so it is in business. We believe and always have believed, that by serving YOUR interests we shall in the end serve our best interests.

DEMONSTRATION BY SUFFRAGETTES

Militant Women Attack English House of Commons.

SMILING POLICE ARE ON GUARD

Arrests to Number of 223 Are Made and No Damage Is Done Save to Window Glass in Neighborhood.

London, Nov. 22.—Having promised to return to its former tactics, the militant section of the suffragettes was not long in making the promise good.

The suffragettes warned Premier Asquith of this last week and last night some 200 suffragettes were marched tenderly by burly London bobbies to various police stations in the neighborhood of the house of commons. They made a fine demonstration, but it suffered in comparison with their earlier ones.

The program which was announced well beforehand was for the women to assemble at their headquarters in Caxton hall, march to Westminster and make demands from the floor of the house. They gathered at Caxton hall in goodly numbers, but fewer than on previous occasions, and speeches were made vigorously condemning the government's manhood suffrage bill as an insult to woman. Miss Christabel Pankhurst presided over this meeting. Resolutions were adopted demanding renewal of the franchise rights for both sexes.

Then the chosen deputation marched forth to storm the house of commons. A large force of police immediately broke up the procession, the members of which made their way by twos and threes to Parliament square.

Here, and at all the approaches to the parliament buildings, several thousand people had gathered to see the fun. There was also an army of police, probably a couple of thousand, who effectively preserved the precincts of parliament from the slightest desecration. A solid, smiling cordon surrounded the buildings, held every approach, kept the crowd moving and invested the whole proceeding with a sense of good-natured, smiling discipline. So long as they kept moving on-lookers might go anywhere except through the cordon which was guarding the parliament buildings. Wheeled traffic was impeded, but not stopped anywhere.

The suffragettes, unable to approach in force, could not make a very imposing show. The usual method of securing arrest was for two or three to run up against a solid line of bobbies, who would gently push them back into the laughing crowd. If this course of action was persisted in often enough it would secure an arrest. Three policemen would be brought out from their reserves behind and they would take the suffragettes to the police station, a mounted policeman making a way for them through the crowd. In this way 223 suffragettes, including three men, were taken to the police stations.

There was one new feature, namely, window smashing. This was not done by the "hooligans" in the crowd, which was chiefly composed of respectable men and women, but by flying squadrons of suffragettes.

Three girls threw stones through a large window of the dining room of the Westminster Palace hotel. The room was full of diners at the time, but fortunately the table by the window which was broken had not yet been occupied. There was scarcely a building on the left side of Parliament square which did not have its windows smashed. The war office windows suffered extensively, as did those of the National Liberal club. Another flying squadron of "dagger volunteers" smashed windows in the Strand.

BOY TELLS OF MURDER

J. Emory Poole Gives Testimony against Father.

Faces Parent While Talking of Acts That Led to Search for Slain Farm Hand.

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 22.—Sitting directly in front of his father, John Emory Poole, nineteen years old, told on the witness stand of his work as an amateur detective that ended in the accusation before the coroner of Benton county that his parent, John W. Poole, was guilty of the murder of Joe Kemper, a farm hand, whose body was later found on the Poole farm.

The youth told with evident eagerness of his observations concerning the mysterious fate of Joe Kemper, and of remarks that made him think his father was guilty of crime. He was subjected to two hours of cross-examination, but did not alter his direct testimony, except in one or two immaterial instances.

The young man testified that he went armed for months following the disappearance of Kemper and prior to his father's arrest, fearing that his parent would kill him. He said his father had threatened to "put him where Kemper was."

He said he found his father's shotgun, his barrel still warm as from a discharge, on the afternoon of Kemper's disappearance.

WILL LIMIT HYDE TESTIMONY

Judge in Kansas City Poison Case to Define Scope of Inquiry.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 22.—Judge Porterfield's court was crowded at the Dr. B. Clark Hyde murder trial. Spectators were eager to hear what remained of the opening statements and the judge's ruling on what evidence is to be allowed.

A ruling on only one important point in the case—the admission of the testimony regarding the death of Chrisman Swope, brother of Mrs. Hyde—remained to be decided by Judge Porterfield. This decision will leave the testimony Dr. Hyde will have to face clearly defined. All testimony relating to the death of Colonel Moss Hunton was ruled out by the judge.

In Mayor's Court.

Mayor J. B. Bowell held court Tuesday morning at the City Hall, and one John Doe, whose real name is David Rither, a cigar maker, was before his honor on the charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct on South street. He pleaded guilty and was given a fine of $1.00 and costs, which amounted to $11.00, and he was taken back to stay eleven days.
